

More than half the world still cooks inside over hazardous open flames. But that's changing, as more and more people get gas-fueled stoves and ovens.